Condé Nast Traveler Editors and Contributors*

NAPA VALLEY, CALIF. (December 23, 2016) – Condé Nast Traveler announced its 2017 Gold List of editors' picks for favorite hotels in the world, with Auberge du Soleil in Napa Valley selected in the North American category.

The Condé Nast Traveler Gold List 2017 recognizes hotels around the world that the title's editors and contributors visit time and time again – and daydream about long after checkout. "This year's Gold List is a collective love letter to all of those hotels and resorts around the world that set the standard for a life well-lived," says Pilar Guzmán in her editor's letter. "So while these stays are meant to take you out of the familiar, they nonetheless serve as the gold standard for how we should treat one another and ourselves – even when we are the ones making the beds."

"We are honored to once again be selected by the well-traveled editors of Condé Nast Traveler as one of the best hotels in the North America," said George Goeggel, Managing Partner, at Auberge du Soleil. "We are honored to share this award with our incredible staff, whose dedication to exceptional service makes every guest experience both memorable and personal."

Auberge du Soleil, California Wine Country's most prestigious inn, is a distinctive property that boasts 50 luxurious rooms and suites, extraordinary valley views, an award-winning spa, Michelin Star restaurant and unparalleled service that sets the standard for gracious hospitality. Napa Valley's only Forbes Five Star hotel, Auberge du Soleil is also a long-standing member of Relais & Châteaux, an international association of outstanding boutique properties known for their excellence in hospitality and culinary arts.
